

Microbiome Ignite Talks

Friday, April 21, 2023

12:10pm - 1pm

Arielle Klepper, MD, PhD,
Clinical Fellow, School of Medicine

Molecular characterization of ascites fluid to identify novel factors associated with spontaneous bacterial peritonitis in patients with chronic liver disease.

Lindsey Pieper,
Graduate Student, Turnbaugh Lab

The global anaerobic metabolism regulator fnr is necessary for the degradation of food dyes and drugs by Escherichia coli.

Join us for lunch!

Clinical Science, CS-0101, Parnassus

Lunch provided on first come, first served basis. This is an in-person event with remote option via Zoom.

Upcoming Events

Microbiome Data Working Group Monthly Meeting

The Invisible Extinction
Film Screening and Q&A

The Benioff Center for Microbiome Medicine provides a centralized home for the healthcare-based community of human microbiome researchers across UCSF, invested in exploring the human microbiome's potential to predict, prevent & treat disease.